Dear Employee (personalized):

I am writing to let you know about a security incident that exposed the personal information of 680 New Hampshire residents.

ADP prepares annual payroll tax statements for employees of our clients, as required for the Individuals to file with their annual income tax forms. In some cases, client employees can access their statement via an online service, allowing them to download and save a PDF version of the statement. As required for tax filing purposes, each PDF presents the payroll tax information (including the employee's name and Social Security number as well as income and tax information) on the face of the document.

On April 29, we discovered that a small number of the PDF files created for one client contained embedded information pertaining to another employee of the same client. This information included the other employee's name, Social Security number and gross annual wages. This information is not visible when the file is opened using Adobe Acrobat, nor is it visible if the PDF file is printed. As a result, individuals who received the affected tax documents do not know that they have the embedded information. Each of the affected PDFs contained the information of one other employee of the same client.

Our investigation revealed that there was a coding error within our application that caused a very small percentage of payroll tax forms to contain incorrectly embedded information. This coding error affected 209 ADP clients. As soon as this discovery was made, we took immediate action to correct the problem. Updated code correcting the error was released on May 4.

ADP is in the process of notifying the clients that were impacted by this incident. Although we believe the risk of harm to be low, we have also prepared notification letters which may be sent to all of the individuals whose data was included in another employee's document. These letters provide these individuals with standard credit monitoring and identity theft insurance.

Please find attached a copy of the notification letter for the affected individuals. We expect this mailing to occur shortly. We would be happy to answer any questions that you may have. Please contact me at (873) 874-7905 with any questions.

Very truly yours,

ADP provides payroll-related services to your employer <name>. As part of providing these services, ADP produces payroll and income tax forms and other documents that include your personal information. Unfortunately, we discovered on April 29 that your name and Social Security number were contained in a tax filing record in an embedded format not visible using the Adobe program or other similar PDF reader that was accidentally disclosed to another employee of the company who was not authorized to receive it. We truly regret that this happened.

What are the risks that my information will be misused?

Because your information was not readily visible in the document, we have no reason to believe that your information has been viewed by any unauthorized person or will be used for any unintended purposes.
